Consider Yourself...Impressed

In a recent production of "Oliver!," Normandy High School junior Ashley Brown had a piece of advice for the title character: "Go home...you little brute!"

Granted, it was just one of her character's two lines in the musical production presented by Variety Children's Theatre. But Ashley, an SSD student and member of the cast ensemble, sang and danced to several familiar tunes, including "Consider Yourself At Home."

However, anyone who knows Ashley will tell you she does not follow the advice of her character.

Along with her growing theater résumé, Ashley finds time away from home to participate in sports, dance and chorus. She is also an active member in the St. Louis 4-H Urban Youth Development program.

Ashley insists all of her extra-curricular activities count as "down time" for her because it allows her to "spend the time with my family and friends."

In middle school, Ashley received her first taste of the theater, playing Shug Avery in the musical cabaret of "The Color Purple."

It comes as no surprise that Ashley enjoys performing on stage — it runs in her family. Her older sister, Amber, is an aspiring actress in Los Angeles, and checks in regularly with Ashley to see how her stage work is coming along.

"She taught me everything I know," Ashley said. "She gives me advice on what to do up there."

Amber, 25, is a graduate of the American Musical and Dramatic Academy, and does work on stage as well as behind the scenes.

Her big sister's advice came in handy as Ashley took part in her first Variety Children's Theater production last fall, serving as the assistant costume director for the production of "Tom Sawyer." After that, she earned her spot on stage in this year's ensemble for "Oliver!"

"My goal is to audition for more productions," Ashley said. "(I always say) 'Don't be afraid to do what you want to do in life.'"

Along with acting on stage, Ashley is the full triple-threat. She performs as a dancer and singer, too. She is a member of the dance ministry team at her church, and she's participated in the Variety Children's Chorus.

So what does Ashley do during those rare times she actually is at home?

"She does chores, like anyone else," her mother, Michelle Mitchell, says. "We don't treat her any differently because she uses a wheelchair."

But Ashley expresses less interest in her chores and more concern with her other at-home activity. "I'm a big gamer," she admits. "I would love to pursue making graphic designs for video games." So much so, she is considering gaining these skills at DeVry University's gaming degree program after finishing high school.

Ashley has been a "Variety kid" since she was three years old, receiving all the equipment she needs, including several wheelchairs, over the years.

Variety the Children's Charity of St. Louis assists more than 1,350 St. Louis area children by providing them with medical equipment that empowers them to be physically independent. It also conducts a number of inclusive programs such as theater, chorus, camps and field trips.

Along with her stage work with Variety, Ashley has been an active soccer player for the past five years with The Disabled Athlete Sports Association. This summer, Ashley and the DASA Firecrackers made it to the national championship in Indianapolis. But that's not the only place her talents have taken her.

Performing with the Variety Children's Chorus, Ashley made a memorable trip to Washington, D.C., to perform at the White House.

However, it's still unclear how much Ashley remembers from the performance.

"Well, I kind of fell asleep on stage," Ashley said.

"It was such a hectic trip, and we did so much traveling to get there, by the time they hit the stage, Ashley was just out," Mitchell explained.

With as much as she does, it's hard to blame her for catching a much-needed nap. ■

Scholarship, Campership Deadlines Approaching Quickly

With the school year approaching the halfway point, many students are already making plans for when the school year wraps up. Summer jobs, time with friends and trips to the park are popular choices.

Many graduating seniors, however, are preparing now for post-secondary education. And it's no secret that the cost of schooling is rising every year.

To help deserving SSD students offset the costs of college and camp tuitions, SSD and other organizations, including the Special Education Foundation (SEF) and the Bonhomme Lions, provide opportunities for scholarships, camperships and other awards.

"The impact of scholarships on the students and their families is significant," said SEF Executive Director Diane Buhr. "It gives a student a great sense of accomplishment to be selected as a scholarship recipient, it aids in self-esteem and provides a very good financial start for the first year of college."

Each reward is unique, and has its own history and special requirements.

Scholarships and camperships will be awarded at the Commitment to Kids Awards Banquet on April 28, 2011.
